

'Empowering Young People to Change the World' 29-30th May 2014

Royal Wootton Bassett Academy (RWBA) and the Institute for Education's (IOE) Centre for Holocaust Education are proud to announce this national teachers conference which seeks to address an important gap in existing educational provision: the empowerment of young people to safeguard the future by learning about the past. It will be held at Royal Wootton Bassett Academy (RWBA), near Swindon, Wiltshire, 29-30th May 2014.

DO YOU WANT TO...

Provide a stimulus for outstanding teaching and learning?

Develop a thirst for knowledge and a love of learning?

Ensure SMSC is outstanding in your school?
Promote tolerance towards others?

Encourage your students to enhance the lives of others?

Develop a whole school ethos based upon a holistic approach?

Embed innovative literacy strategies and use of ICT throughout your school?

This IOE & RWBA collaboration aims to support teachers through high profile expert keynote speakers, seminar discussions & a series of hands on, practical workshops designed to inform, inspire & support outstanding teaching & learning in the classroom. The conference is supported, & will involve contributions from, a range of educational organisations & networks. It will showcase cutting edge research, share best practice and advocate a holistic educational approach, for as Nelson Mandela stated:

‘Education is the most powerful weapon which you can use to change the world’.

‘If just one or two students take an informed passion & commitment for others into the world, their skills & talents into the workplace of the developing world & beyond, or continue to advocate as passionately for human rights in the future, recognising their own responsibilities & shared humanity – then what a tremendous contribution that would make! What a role education can play!’
